Celebrating Freedom

245 years.

That's how long it's been since the Second Continental Congress unanimously adopted the Declaration of Independence on July 4, 1776 right here in Philadelphia. The 13 American colonies were no longer content to be ruled by the British, so our forefathers affirmed our unalienable rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

These ideals are especially evident in Philadelphia, the birthplace of freedom. The heart of the Philadelphia Wholesale Produce Market (PWPM), like the American spirit, embodies unity, cooperation, and teamwork. All of the businesses at the PWPM are independent of each other, yet we recognize that we all belong to a larger, interconnected whole. We trade amongst ourselves, we deliver each other's items to shared customers, and more importantly, we strive for solidarity, mutual trust and respect. Camaraderie and competition work in unison to make us a thriving marketplace.

Let freedom ring...

The Prizes of July

July is a great time of year to visit the PWPM because we are bursting with a dynamic array of fruit and vegetables. All of our businesses have a wide selection of quality produce from nearby farms as well as international ports. Local produce is always a sentimental favorite, but we are grateful that our vicinity near the Port of Philadelphia (Philaport) assures a steady supply of fresh produce from around the globe.

Come in and feast your eyes on everything from homegrown staples to exotic specialties. If you're new to the Market, we invite you to come check us out!!!

Heads Up!

July is both National Picnic Month and National Watermelon Month! Think of the possibilities!
